

New Timetable 20th May 2018

No Through Trains to Nutfield (And Godstone)

Yes, the disappointment for losing through services to London isn't good but how does the service add up.

By removing the trains they now run to an hourly most of the day, supplemented to half hourly at peak, all to a very regular timetable.

From Nutfield, until 10am trains leave half hourly to Redhill at :01 & :31, then its :36 though rest of the day to 4pm when it goes to :20 & :50, reverting back to :36 after 8pm – Godstone 4 minutes earlier

From Redhill, morning peak is :22 & :52, until 10am when they leave on the hour (:00) with additional train on the half hour (:30) from 15:30 to 19:30) – until 23:00 with a last train at 00:16 from Redhill

Godstone is 5 minutes earlier to Redhill and 4/5 minutes later from Redhill

London Bridge

In the morning to London is OK. London Bridge is mostly faster than today with a cross-platform connection at Redhill it's a good service with a simple repeating pattern all morning.

Returning from London Bridge is a bit of a pain. The fastest peak journey at 57 minutes requires two changes at East Croydon and Redhill. It also takes about 10 minutes longer than today.

To cut to a single change you need to xx:00 or xx:30 from London Bridge which arrives at Redhill earlier than the double change but you depart 7 minutes earlier.

During off peak (i.e. not between 4pm and 7pm), catching the xx:21 or xx:51 from London Bridge, gives an 8 minute change at Redhill and takes 43 minutes.

Last connecting train from London Bridge is 23:37

London Victoria

Here the loss of all day through trains is compounded by the Southern service being generally slower to Victoria by calling at all stations to Purley.

It is more felt in the off-peak and evenings when journey time extends but the service in the peak is only slightly slower albeit with a forced change at Redhill.

Last connecting Train is 23:36 from Victoria
