More Services at Reigate

Yes, there are no longer any through trains to London Bridge, compensation is a 6 day a week half hourly service to London Victoria from early morning to late at night. First Train to Victoria is 06:06 and last train from Victoria is 23:09

London Bridge/Thameslink

The fastest route for London Bridge in the morning is change at East Croydon. Alternatively, it can be done at Redhill but will take 7 minutes longer. You are also staying Southern only by changing at East Croydon and the LBG train literally follows the Victoria one in to platform 4 so should be an easy change.

For Thameslink core stations and beyond you are best changing at Redhill.

At 47 minutes programmed Journey time to London Bridge it is on average faster than before unless you were on the 6:24, which connected with a super fast LBG train at Redhill which no longer runs. It is now more regular although I don't think departure times will suit most people.

The return service from London Bridge in the evening peak has 4 per hour either changing at East Croydon or Redhill – The East Croydon changes are again same platform off the Uckfield trains so avoiding the Thameslink bottom ache. (Details in Schedule)

London Victoria

The Benefit of course is the half hourly Victoria service all day taking around 46/8 minutes, which is longer than today but there are twice as many services. The longer journeys will be felt off peak and Saturdays mostly and peak it is about the same as current except for a few specific trains.

In the morning peak they leave for Victoria at mostly 06 & 36, then from 10am they are on the hour and half-hour for the rest of the day last at 23:00.

Return trains leave Victoria at xx:09 and xx:39 from 05:39 to 23:09, leave ECR at xx:27 & xx:57 (normally platform 6) and Redhill at xx:19 & xx:49 (except peaks when a few minutes later)

Although timings may not suit many (especially the gap from 07:36 to 08:06 which no GWR train fills) it is actually an uplift in Reigate services

Last Trains

Victoria 23:09 – through train

Connection from London Bridge is 23:00, Farringdon 22:49
